Polaroid Corporation

Overview: Polaroid Corporation, a Massachusetts-based multinational Fortune 100 company with a long-established corporate identity and its own internal security team, became aware of an impending threat to one of its senior executives in a South American country. In the course of their initial investigation it was discovered they would need the help of an outside partner with experience in international security, threat assessment, logistical planning and investigations in order to protect its employees and resources.

The Problem: The client had an escalating problem in South America with death threats against the country manager and his family after he discovered and reported wrongdoing.

Strategic Recommendation: RMA Global worked with its corporate partner to immediately assess the real threat to its staff. RMA developed a comprehensive plan to protect the life and property of the corporate executive, his family, and the interests of the corporation.

Program Elements:

- Personal Protection of clients
- Surveillance and investigation of wrongdoing

Results: RMA Global was contacted and responded with boots on the ground in less than 8 hours. Upon completion of a full security audit, an additional 16 agents were deployed with the family and remained for approximately 3 weeks while a forensic audit was conducted to determine the extent of the wrongdoing that was uncovered by the country manager.
